

U. S. CLEANS UP AND DELOUSES ALL IMMIGRANTS

Thousands Held Up in Quarantine Daily and Fumigated to Prevent Spread of Typhus and Other Diseases.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Immigrant detention station of the New York quarantine service, now has an average transient population of more than 1,000 a day due to the inbound rush of Italian immigrants.

In addition, the five doctors attached to the station have given up all thoughts of vacation and are working day and night to keep the station clean and free of disease. They are vaccinating, fumigating and inspecting prospective citizens and their families.

The reason for the unusual call for the services of Hoffman island is said to be a misunderstanding on the part of Italian officials and treasury companies respecting United States public health regulations. Travelers from districts where typhus and other transmittable diseases are prevalent are to be "deloused," examined and certified as "clean" to American public health officers before they board the ship.

These regulations are not being complied with, officials here claim, and therefore the delousing and fumigating must be done before the traveler is landed. The expense of the work here is charged to the steamship companies.

During the last week more than half dozen ships have arrived from ports where typhus carrying suspects could be taken on board. All of these ships have been detained in quarantine while the average passenger number from one to 2,000 on each ship, were taken off on barges, landed at Hoffman island and detained for 24 to 48 hours.

During the detention they are compelled to take a thorough bath from the tops of their heads to the soles of their feet. Their clothing, baggage and effects are put through a bath of live steam. From Hoffman island the immigrants are taken to Ellis island for examination by immigration authorities as to their qualifications.

TENNIS BODIES MAY YET MERGE

Showing Made by U. S. Players Makes Affiliation Idea Stronger.

By JACK VEELOCK.
(International News Sporting Editor.)
NEW YORK, July 26.—The possibility of the United States Lawn Tennis Association affiliating with the International Lawn Tennis Federation is getting a great deal of speculative attention these days on both sides of the Atlantic.

The wonderful showing made by American players in recent tennis classics in England brought the question of this affiliation into bolder relief than it has enjoyed for some time, but the U. S. L. T. A. at this writing is still tending firm against the move.

The stand of the American parent tennis body has been largely because of the fact that the federation has insisted all along on the perpetual award of the so-called world's tennis championships to Wimbledon. Watson Washburn, chairman of the U. S. L. T. A. committee which conferred with officials of the federation, has outlined the stand of the Americans as follows and it appears that the stand is justified.

"We are second to none in our respect for the splendid traditions of Wimbledon, and we hope and believe they will be more splendid still. But it is not as unreasonable for England to claim a perpetual right to the world's individual championship because of her early services to the game, as it would have been for America to insist on having the Davis cup matches played always in America because an American originated them? Such a perpetual ownership is unknown in other sports. Either rotation, as in the Olympic games, or challenge matches, as in universal. We have suggested both these alterations, with various modifications to the International Federation, but so far without success. However, we are hopeful of the final result.

Commenting upon this the London Field said: "Is Mr. Washburn's plea sound? Undoubtedly it is, and we go further and say that the position created today is precisely what the Field feared would develop when seven years ago it protested against the conferment of the title 'world's championships' on the championships at Wimbledon. Our argument then was that it holds good today, despite the acceptance of the title, that the word 'championships' sanctified by history and tradition, is quite good enough for all concerned, that to add 'world's' to this designation was like painting the lily, that such a device was derogatory to an amateur game, and that to persist in the proposal might conceivably offend our American friends with whom we desired to be on terms of the most cordial relationship. But our legislators did not share our views, however honest and well meaning they may be.

"The first step is to get America into conference, the next is to constitute an international board from which America can not possibly be excluded, the third is to remove the purely commercial taint of 'world's' from the Wimbledon program, an act which would in no way disparage the tournament or impair its popularity, nor reduce its gate nor detract from the honor and prestige of winning the championship. It may be said, 'But suppose America or Australia establish a world's championship of their own? Every championship meeting is open to the whole world. It is a governing body to agree in principle that no country should be allowed to arrogate to itself a title which is inimical to the best and truest interests of amateur sport.

"In connection with the foregoing, the recent correspondence between Julian S. Murray, president of the U. S. L. T. A., and Lord Cowdray, president of the British L. T. A., illustrates the possibilities of an agreement being reached.

French Use Negro Moslems As Guards In Constantinople

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 26.—Black troops, many of them Senegalese, have been used by the French in their joint occupation of this city. The Senegalese wear bright green uniforms and red fezzes. Their faces are decorated with scars across the cheeks and about the eyes. They usually wear large brass helmets and carry shields and spears. Although the Senegalese are Moslems, they get badly with the Turks, especially in the interior, where much of the feeling against the French is traceable to the black troops.

A member of the Turkish foreign office staff who was educated at several European universities and has lived all over the world, recently approached a group of Senegalese soldiers near the Sublime Porte and engaged them in conversation, addressing them in French.

"Just why did you come over here?" he asked.

"We came to bring civilization to the Turks," the leader of the group replied haughtily.

QUIT MINING AND SEARCH FOR RUM

Manitoba Men Pass Up Gold To Find 150-Year-Old "Likker."

THE PAS, Man., July 26 (Spt.).—More than ten cases of rum, 150 years old, are buried near Cumberland House, an old Hudson's Bay company fur post famous in early history, have been discovered. The gold seekers, however, have deferred their search for gold to search for this liquid treasure.

French wood runners and trappers in the employ of the Northwest company, then the great rival of the Hudson's Bay company, visited Cumberland House on their way toward the Athabasca region in the latter part of the eighteenth century. They had then the rum to be used in trading with Indians for furs. The Hudson's Bay company claimed exclusive trapping rights in the country and disapproved the use of liquor in bargaining with the natives. The Hudson's Bay company men blocked the passage of the French voyagers through the territory and turned them back. Before they began their retreat the Frenchmen buried their rum. They finally reached Fort Garry now, Winnipeg. Their diary of their adventures, which was recently found and it told of the burial of the liquor. It did not indicate, however, the exact spot at which the cache was made.

Through the old empire of the Hudson's Bay company has vanished and the company is now closing out its last remaining lands to volunteers. Cumberland House is still a flourishing fur post and ships out immense quantities of peltries annually.
